Rainer Zierock: Axioms of the Farming Culture.

Farm the earth so that it gives you joy, nourishment and hope.

Respect the earth and its fertility as if they were a part of yourself.

The earth is not only the means but also the end for our actions.

You should be dedicated to the earth's fertility; preserve it and help to increase its diversity.

If man were to preserve life in the earth, to devote himself to the conservation of its equilibriums and to respect the balance found, he would provide forever the foundations for the establishment and expansion of the living.

He who patiently listens and studies the earth and plant is able to understand them.

A "bad" earth does not exist.

Every earth can generate life, if it is tended with love.
